Eligibility Criteria:

- Indian Nationals: Only Indian citizens are eligible for the award.

- Contributions to Medicine: The award recognizes excellence in various branches of medicine, including medical practice, research, and development of medical specialties.

- Outstanding Service: The award also recognizes outstanding contributions to socio-medical relief and the establishment of medical organizations and institutions.

- Minimum Years of Experience:

  Many awards require a minimum number of years of practice in a specific field.

- Degrees and Diplomas:

  Higher-level qualifications like MD, DNB, FRCGP, and other advanced degrees or diplomas can add to an applicant's merit.

- Specialization and Subspecialisation:
  Awards may be specifically for those with a particular specialization or subspecialisation, such as cardiology or cardiac surgery.

Contributions and Achievements:

- Scientific Publications:

  Awards often recognize individuals who have published research in indexed journals or authored chapters in textbooks.

- Academic Contributions:

  Lecturing, teaching, or participating in Continuing Medical Education (CME) programs can be considered.

- Social Work and Community Involvement:

  Awards may recognize contributions to social work and projects that benefit the community.

- Patient Care:

  Some awards focus on exceptional patient care, including those who provide care in rural or underserved areas.

- Leadership and Administration:

  Contributions to the administration of medical institutions or professional associations can be a factor.

- Awards and Recognition:
  Prior national, international, or state-level awards can enhance an application.

Other Factors:

- Ethical Stature:

  Awards may consider an individual's reputation for ethical and moral conduct.

- Membership in Professional Organizations:

  Membership in organizations like the Indian Medical Association (IMA) or specialty-specific associations may be given weight.
